PRAISE FOR BALLOTS, BULLETS, AND BARGAINS

"Solidly researched and well written, Ballots, Bullets, and Bargains tackles a topic that has attracted a lot of off-the-cuff commentary, yet little in the way of sustained analysis—the interaction of the electoral cycle and presidential foreign policy decision making. Michael H. Armacost ably mines an array of sources in order to examine a relationship that is ungainly and difficult to track."

JAMES M. LINDSAY, Council on Foreign Relations

"Drawing on careful study as well as his own rich experience as a diplomat, Michael H. Armacost offers unique and nuanced insights. This is a superb discussion of U.S. foreign policy in the context of presidential politics since the elections of 1948. With less than two years to go before our next presidential contest, this is an especially timely and thoughtful read."

JOHN NEGROPONTE, former deputy secretary of state

"Michael H. Armacost has created a detailed history of post-World War II American foreign policy, organized and interpreted in the phases of our presidential election process. His insights about the dynamic interplay between campaign politics and foreign policy do not reassure that the world's major power can produce leaders with the vision and experience to effectively manage America's international engagement. Yet despite political dysfunction, our presidents have shown skill in learning on the job and using our substantial national resources in the service of the security and international interests of the United States."

RICHARD H. SOLOMON, former director of policy planning and assistant secretary of state, former president of the United States Institute of Peace, and senior fellow at the RAND Corporation
